15 Years of Service

1992 was the year. Pete Wilson was governor of California, Unforgiven won the Oscar® for Best Picture, The Real World premiered on MTV, and, on October 26, Metrolink commenced service to a traffic-weary Southern California with trains from Moorpark, Pomona, and Santa Clarita to the newly refurbished Union Station in Los Angeles.

That date 15 years ago seems like just yesterday, but what a difference a decade-and-a-half make. Metrolink now spans 512 miles and 55 stations in six counties, carrying over 42,000 riders per day.

Metrolink would like to thank you, our riders, for making the past 15 years so successful. We hope you’ve enjoyed your commute with us, and look forward to sharing many more years to come.

Let’s take a look back at some of the milestones that make up the years spent preparing for Metrolink and the past 15 years of Metrolink service:

The Metrolink/Garfield Challenge

Metrolink has issued a challenge to the student body of East Los Angeles’ famous James A. Garfield High School. As part of our 15th-anniversary celebration, we will take 100 students on an all-expenses-paid day of fun at Disneyland—but only students who have met the Metrolink/Garfield Challenge. To qualify to be one of the 100, a student must either be in the top 1 percent of his or her class or raise his or her grade point average by an entire point.

Garfield High in Los Angeles is probably most famous as the home of Stand and Deliver educator Jaime Escalante. Academic excellence is an ongoing theme of this school of nearly 4,600 students. Garfield High currently counts among its student body the top student in the country. The academic decathlon team is ranked ninth in the state.

Metrolink, on the eve of celebrating our 15th anniversary, decided that the Metrolink/Garfield Challenge would bring (continued on page 4)

New Locomotives

Metrolink is happy to announce the purchase of 15 new locomotives from Motive Power Industries in Boise, Idaho. The new, streamlined locomotives are similar to the latest models that SCRRRA currently operates, but they are about 10 feet longer. The 3,600-horsepower locomotives are also cleaner and greener than current models, so they will produce notably fewer emissions.

Santa Ana Second Main Track Cut-Over

Bottleneck be gone! On the weekend of September 15, a stretch of track that has long frustrated some Orange County and Inland Empire–Orange County line riders became a site of smooth sailing as one of the last sections of single track on the Orange County Line was transitioned to double-track service.

The lone track, located between the Orange and Santa Ana stations, served trains in both directions. Every day, trains traveling in one direction would have to wait until an oncoming train cleared that section of track. With the cut-over last month, a one-way road has become a two-lane highway, allowing trains to travel in both directions simultaneously!

The Santa Ana Second Main Track project has been in the works for years to improve the 1.8-mile stretch of single track in the midst of a 50-mile double-track segment. Since the late 1990s, engineers and others have been working on environmental clearance and more to improve the situation. Over the last few years, design work was completed and construction has occurred. And about a year ago, the $25 million construction project was green-lighted.

The project involved a significant amount of utility work on Lincoln Avenue, the site of a nice new wall. Improvements have been made to several other adjacent streets. When the project is finished, everyone who rides this stretch of railroad track will appreciate improved efficiency on the rails.

The Metrolink/Garfield Challenge

together two groups of people to celebrate two great achievements: 15 years of first-class commuter-rail service and 15 weeks of outstanding grades.

The Metrolink/Garfield Challenge Train will roll on October 29 and will include charter-train “limo” service from Los Angeles to Anaheim, snacks on board, entry into Disneyland, and a Disney Dollar gift card good for meals and souvenirs. Department directors from Metrolink will welcome the kids on
We expect to see the first of the new locomotives on the rails later this year. Most of the new locomotives will be in service by early next year, with all of them expected to be on track by July 1. The arrival of the new locomotives will lead to expanded Metrolink service. With these 15 new locomotives, Metrolink will proudly get greener and more rider-friendly in one fell swoop.

Safety Matters

On a crisp Friday morning in September, in an effort to heighten awareness about the importance of rail safety, the Metrolink Safety Department and members of the Southern California Rail Safety Team worked with several law-enforcement agencies on an Officer-on-a-Train safety event along the Union Pacific and Blue Line tracks between 24th Street and Greenleaf in Los Angeles.

Officers from several law-enforcement agencies, including the Metrolink Division of the Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department, were stationed at several vehicle and pedestrian railroad crossings along the tracks at Metro Green Line stations. Four hundred ninety-six citations were issued to pedestrians who ignored the lights and bells, which are known as active warning devices, at the pedestrian crossings. In addition, 19 drivers were issued citations as part of the event.

It is illegal to cross when the lights and bells are activated. Persons must wait until the active warning devices cease before crossing. Many passengers assume the crossing devices are activated by the train currently in the station. However, a second train that is out of view may be approaching the station using the tracks that are being crossed, resulting in injury or death of the person crossing the tracks illegally. The fine for crossing while the pedestrian warning devices are active is $271.

Kid Commuters

At 7:18 a.m. on weekday mornings, Leigh and Kate Nilsen, 4 and 2 years old, hop on the Antelope Valley Line at Santa Clarita and ride to Union Station. It’s no big trip to them—they’ve been commuting via Metrolink since they were babies. Their father, Jon Nilsen, works near Union Station at the USC Health Sciences campus, where on-site daycare is provided. He’s been traveling to work on the train since just after Leigh was born, so he started bringing her along as soon as he could. As babies, the girls adjusted easily to the one-hour ride, sleeping most of the way in a BABYBJÖRN® carrier on Dad’s chest. Needless to say, the girls have charmed fellow passengers, making numerous friends who look forward to sharing their daily rides with Leigh and Kate. Dad says one of Kate’s first phrases was “downtown Burbank”—“she’d announce the train stop as we came in.”
